

in, the implementation and evaluation of the CALFED Program. Formal project-specific consultation with tribes will be conducted on a government-to-government basis as future projects are identified that may potentially affect Native American trust assets.

The CALFED agencies are also working to address a range of environmental justice issues in the context of program implementation. Most notably, the CALFED agencies are working with environmental justice and community stakeholders to develop a comprehensive environmental justice work plan across all program areas. This work plan will ensure that these issues continue to be considered and addressed as the program is implemented.
